Webinar overview

AI has made applying for a job easier than ever. For hiring teams, that's created a different kind of problem.

Application volumes are up. But quality, commitment, and confidence in the process? For many leading employers, they're heading in the other direction.

Join us on Wednesday 15th July at 11am, where we'll be bringing together some of the sharpest minds in TA to have that conversation. This live webinar will be 45 minutes with time for audience Q&A, so bring any burning questions you have.

The panel

Moderator
Kirsten Barnes
Chief Executive Officer at Bright Apply

Kirsten leads Bright Apply with 15+ years at the intersection of careers and technology, and a conviction that done right, it can make hiring better for recruiters and candidates alike.

Speaker
Matthew Jeffery
Global Talent Acquisition Leader

One of the most respected voices in global talent acquisition, Matthew has spent decades at the forefront of how organisations find and keep the best people. He brings a frank, industry-wide perspective on what AI is really doing to hiring.

Speaker
Tom Wicksteed
Head of Talent at Mishcon de Reya

Tom leads talent at one of the UK's most prominent law firms, where he's navigating the challenge first-hand: how do you maintain hiring standards when the volume of applications has fundamentally changed? He'll share what's working, what isn't, and what he'd do differently.

Speaker
Olivia Sanchez
Product Director at Bright Apply

Olivia leads Product at Bright Apply, working out what's worth building, how it'll create value for our customers, and making sure it gets built properly. She has ten years across financial services, technology, and AI products, and is experienced in bringing products to life.

Screen better. Screen faster. Screen fairly.

If your team is receiving more applications than it has time to review properly, that's the problem Bright Apply was built to solve.
